Q: Why do I get a syntax error in this shell script? I am trying to use this script to keep track of disk usage on my server and it keeps throwing me a syntax error: #!/bin/bash mon=`date +%H-%M-%S` TIMES=`df -i | awk '{print $1}' | grep Total | awk '{print $7}'` if [[$TIMES!= "0"]]; then echo $mon, 'total disk usage:$TIMES echo "Saving to /var/log/diskusage" >> /var/log/diskusage.log fi It says I am missing ; after [[. I've checked and I don't have any kind of ; after if or [[. A: You need some spaces around the [[and]] as well as before the if and after the fi. A: You are not using [[]] properly, remove spaces around it. (And stop using [[]] anyway, it is almost always better to use [...] than test $x, and just use $(...). Also, your script would work fine as is if you remove the following block: if ["$TIMES"!= "0"]; then echo $mon, 'total disk usage:$TIMES echo "Saving to /var/log/diskusage" >> /var/log/diskusage.log fi As you can see, the single quotes are unnecessary in [[$TIMES!= "0"]]. In addition, the if statement and the echo command following it are enclosed in [...] and (double) quotes respectively, so they don't need to be escaped. Your script is equivalent to: if ["$TIMES"!= "0"] then echo $mon, 'total disk usage:$TIMES echo "Saving to /var/log/diskusage" >> /var/log/diskusage.log fi If you prefer the actual equivalent, change the if statement to this: if ["$TIMES"!= "0"]; then echo

Catastrophic failure in a wide-diameter single-stage femoral component due to wear: a case report. We report a case of osteolysis of the medial femoral cortex in a ceramic-on-ceramic total hip arthroplasty resulting in the development of a pseudotumour and a bony defect with penetration of the cement and trabeculae of the proximal femur. The patient underwent a one-stage revision procedure with a long stem and a wide polyethylene cup.The Struggle By Shadowsc0tt Watch 16 Favourites 2 Comments 3K Views [This is my first attempt at drawing something in over a year] Part of a painting series I have going on called "The Struggle". It's about life as a human and the struggle of being born to a family and living in a world where predators are rampant and growth is being begrudgingly pushed back by the darkness. A loose idea of what I'm trying to paint. What caught my eye is, I feel like a lot of characters in the story are struggling to make their way, while at the same time facing strength from the enemies they are up against. _____ This is my first attempt at drawing something in over a year. Hope you like it. We reported that delayed treatment with recombinant tissue plasminogen activator (r-tPA) is not effective in the treatment of subarachnoid hemorrhage, although immediate treatment is effective. We hypothesized that delayed treatment with r-tPA causes more severe brain damage, including delayed brain infarct or transient ischemic attack, by inducing cyclooxygenase 2 (COX2) expression in the cerebral cortex. This hypothesis was examined using a rat permanent middle cerebral artery occlusion (pMCAO) model. Anti-COX2 antibody was injected intracerebrally from 2 h after pMCAO up to 24 h. Injection of the antibody intracerebrally 15 min after pMCAO reduced the ischemic inf
